

2011: A FAMILY IS A PATCHWORK OF LOVE

This past year Volunteers of America, like many other human service organizations, faced the continuance of a slowly recovering economy, dropping employment and uncertain health care funding issues. But this did not stop us from effectively meeting the challenge of serving our country's most vulnerable citizens. Every day during 2011, Volunteers of America was immersed in the needs and lives of the often invisible and forgotten—veterans, the frail elderly, at-risk youth and families, people with intellectual disabilities, formerly incarcerated individuals and so many more. No matter how the social and political climate may have changed during 2011, the needs of these Americans remained the same: urgent and immediate.

The steady and often silent cries for help continued to rise from millions of people in need across the country. And in 2011, our Volunteers of America family—a network of 16,000 professionals from Maine to Alaska—intuitively listened, valiantly approached and compassionately answered 2.5 million of those cries. Not only did we break through the previous year's record of people served, but we also built a case for support for serving our nation's veterans. Recognizing Volunteers of America as one of the leading providers of affordable housing and services for veterans, The Home Depot® Foundation awarded Volunteers of America $1.8 million over the next three years to repair and rehab properties serving veterans and their families. We are so proud to be serving those who have served their country.

Also in 2011, the number of children and youth served through encouraging positive development rose to 140,000. We fostered independence for almost 400,000 people collectively within our disabilities, elderly, health care and mental health programs and services, and increased the number of housing facilities for families, the disabled and elderly by more than 360 units. We promoted self-sufficiency through community enhancement, correctional services, employment and training services, health care prevention, homeless services, housing for families and single adults and substance abuse for almost 2 million people. And we anticipate this number rising in 2012.

During this past year, we continued to ask the hard questions, looking for the best solutions for each individual we served. We maintained a dialogue on Capitol Hill, taking the moral high ground that we should not balance our budget on the backs of our most vulnerable, often sick and elderly, citizens who literally built our country. We met with decision makers at the local level, asking, "What if?" What if we could protect children who age out of foster care from the dangers of drug addiction and life on the street? Or ensure that those without a home of their own could find safe shelter? What if we could support our country's servicemen and women with a safe environment where they are not only gratefully recognized for their patriotic contribution, but each veteran's needs are individually addressed to optimize their ability to succeed? Asking these types of questions allowed Volunteers of America to forge through another economically tough year and focus on what is most important—effectively caring for our fellow Americans in need.

Our faith is our strongest bond; where we serve is our church; and caring for those most in need is how we worship. As we lovingly stitch this past year's successes into our quilt of memories, wrapping up another year of our ministry of service, we invite you to become a part of our family in 2012.

God bless you,

MIKE KING

TWO OF OUR FAMILY MEMBERS: KARYN AND DONOVAN

“When Donovan got sick, he was just 14 years old,” said Karyn Hills. “I hadn’t been working long enough at my job to qualify for the Family Medical Leave of Absence so I had to give it up, losing almost everything I had.”

Karyn’s only son, Donovan, was just like every other active teenager—vibrant and happy, and loved to be outside with friends playing sports. He decided to try out for his high school football team. As is routine for most school sports, a physical exam was required for his participation. But one of Donovan’s test results was unusual. There was an abnormality found on his thigh, and the medical professionals couldn’t determine what it was.

Then Donovan awoke one morning with his leg throbbing and painfully inflamed. Karyn immediately rushed her son to the hospital. The medical staff ran a series of tests for almost an hour. The findings were not good.

“When the primary care doctor came to talk to me he said, ‘Ms. Hills, the radiologist and the oncologist are going to come talk to you.’ When he said oncologist...I knew,” said Karyn.

A large, malignant mass was found covering Donovan’s femur. There was no question that he needed immediate help, and so Karyn and her son left Baton Rouge, La., for St. Jude Children’s Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn. Karyn and Donovan had embarked on a journey into a world of unknowns: How could Karyn manage to stay with Donovan and see him through his frightening ordeal? How could they afford a place to live if Karyn wasn’t working anymore? Where could she turn for help?

“The day Donovan was to have his surgery,” Karyn recalled, “there were four other children being operated on as well. Donovan was the only one that came out without having a limb amputated. They were able to save his leg by removing the entire femur and replacing it with titanium. I thank God every day, they saved his leg.”

And although Karyn felt that Donovan had been blessed not having lost his leg, her worries on maintaining a roof over their head were rising. St. Jude Children’s Research Hospital referred Karyn to Volunteers of America in Baton Rouge, and she made the call. Bridget, a seasoned caseworker, immediately asked Karyn to fax all of her personal and financial information. Sharon, another Volunteers of America professional, and Bridget felt the Volunteers of America Housing First program was the right fit for Karyn. They began the search for an affordable apartment. Once the paperwork was completed, qualifying Karyn as a resident, mother and son moved into their new home...not having to worry where they would sleep while Donovan recuperated from surgery.

“Bridget and Sharon were working every day for me, providing the caring spirit I needed to get through this,” said Karyn. “They took care of me so I could take care of Donovan. If it wasn’t for Volunteers of America, I don’t know where we would be.”

Donovan missed his entire freshman year of high school, but today his spirits are high, and he has developed many new interests outside of football. He is 17 now and has been in remission for almost three years. Karyn and Donovan still make the trip to St. Jude Children’s Research Hospital for follow-up medical visits every three months, but they leave knowing they will have a home to come back to. Volunteers of America will continue to make certain they do.

OUR MISSION STATEMENT

Volunteers of America is a movement organized to reach and uplift all people and bring them to the knowledge and active service of God.

Volunteers of America, illustrating the presence of God through all that we do, serves people and communities in need and creates opportunities for people to experience the joy of serving others.

Volunteers of America measures success through positive change in the lives of individuals and communities we serve.

GROWING IN CHALLENGING TIMES

Notwithstanding the many economic difficulties our nation faced during this past fiscal year, Volunteers of America grew by 7.4 percent. We reached revenues exceeding $1 billion. External funding pressures continued to challenge our programs, but the growth was a result of adding new, low-income housing facilities to our portfolio while tightening our belts with existing programs.

As Volunteers of America continues to face challenges in this uncertain economy, the needs of those seeking our services will continue to rise. That is why discerning donors continue to support Volunteers of America. Sound fiscal management earns their faith and trust.
